Fire District Appeals Hackett Case

by Neal Philip

Hey all, it's been awhile since I checked in at the Loop, so an article about what's happening over at the fire department seems to be in order. To start off, I have to say that although I'm on the board of fire commissioners for Vashon Island Fire & Rescue, the thoughts I'm about to share are my own and do not necessarily musicians, singers, represent those of the board or the fire district. The district continues to evolve and Chief Hank is making dramatic improvements in many areas.

Island Businesses Look Good

by Linda J. Bianchi, President, Vashon Maury Island Chamber of Commerce, Windermere Real Estate

While walking the streets of downtown Vashon, Center and Burton this past week, I noticed an upbeat attitude by our local businesses. Shop doors open to fresh mild breezes, well deserved sunny weather and the pulse of summer is in the air. This has been a long, tough winter, not only for our local businesses, but for businesses large and small across our state and country.

gender discrimination lawsuit and Mrs. Hackett's judgment against VIFR. Although the district stands behind its personnel and does not agree with the judge's decision that it engaged in gender discrimination, the fact is that the judge found to the contrary. To make sure that everyone in the department understands that harassment will not be tolerated, we recently adopted a zero tolerance policy regarding harassment. We also took input from the community men age 16 and older who are regarding whether the department should appeal the judgment, and found that community opinion was split on the issue. The decision on whether to appeal was a difficult decision, but because of the large judgment and some significant issues with what happened at trial, we recently decided to appeal. Some will disagree with our decision, but we believe that appealing the judgment is necessary to fully protect the interests of the taxpayers we are sworn to serve. Another issue we face is charging for ambulance transport to hospitals. You might remember that the department nearly started charging for such transports last year but tabled the issue. If you have thoughts on this issue, you need to let us know now. The economy is very different than it was when this issue last came up, and we may need of the bill she might get. But we also need to take into consideration that providing "free rides" to the hospital, particularly when many other departments charge for such services, might no longer be appropriate. We need your help in deciding how to balance these competing concerns; you can contact me at nealphilip@yahoo.com and the commissioners' next regular meeting is June 9th.

These are just a few issues that the department is dealing with, and there are certainly more. Relatively speaking, though, VIFR is in a good place. The career and volunteer men and women who respond to your 911 calls are professionals in every way and you are well-served by those who are responding. But we can always use more volunteers, and if you would like to volunteer, whether as a firefighter, emergency medical technician, or in a support role, we'd love to have you. The Big Lie

by Deborah H. Anderson

"Ladies and Gentlemen, when it rains it pours." Thus began the explanation for the second plane breaking down making a thirty-two minute trip from Dallas to Austin last five hours.

I had told the pilot in a joking way as we deplaned from the first aircraft that had a sensor problem in the landing gear, "My daughter has her first major performance tonight and I can't miss it." Fortunately a couple of years ago, someone had told me about the condition and difficulties of MD-80's. I took it in stride knowing prayer and chewing gum and duct tape would take care of the situation. A mother with a young girl got off the second plane after minutes about thirty and announced 'We're driving sweetie."

The guy across the aisle after making a very vocal phone to call his secretary to never book him on that particular airline again, made an announcement that "Southwest has a 4:50 and there's room!" before he dashed off to make the connection.

Me? I played my best "Frasier" making jokes with the maintenance guy walking the aisle (someone on the ground had shorted out the PA system this time) that I had a 2lb Trader Joe's 72% dark chocolate in my carry on that was his if he could get me to Austin in time. Unfortunately they don't have Trader Joe's in Texas (too far from the warehouse) so the joke was lost.

I made it there at 6:15. Got to the apartment in time to shower the stink off. No time to do hair. Looked dreadful for meeting all the Profs, but my fanny was in that seat when the curtain went up.

And, as a public thank you to the dozens of you who have donated thousands of dollars towards, "the voice," I wish to announce she knocked it out of the ballpark. I mean way, way out. Beyond anything I could ever have imagined.

Businesses, as my plane ride a liquor contract. During a recession/depression people drink more. If you are in business, you better be about the dollar. Business is not a service related industry. It's a profit/loss situation. You can be a kind businessperson who gives back but you better be about the dollar or you're not going to have any money or goods to donate. Once upon a time Island businesses only had to be convenient. Now they have to be competitive.

But now, we will have the visual statement to tourists, and ourselves, that how we are defined as a community is with liquor very much as a mainstream part of our lives. We haven't been able to admit that before.

So what will we focus on? What do you focus on?

I think we can look at both the sunny and the sour if we keep our eyes on transformation. Right now, we mostly look at development. What do I mean? Let me give you an example. Every child develops pretty much naturally. Add an attentive nurturing adult and their life is transformed into a gift. Each of us can develop our skills and talents. We are not transformed until we share them with someone else.

The Big Lie says we can't look at things negatively in a public forum. The Big Truth is that if this community is to survive, we will have to look at the negative and positive sides of things and say, "What will transform us into the healthiest community with all the givens of diversity and pleasures".

It happens if we do it in our own personal lives. Is your life a transforming experience or is it just developing? Your community is counting on transformation. Love, Deborah

The collapse of the banking industry in the fall, 2008, and the stock market in early 2009 brought our economy and businesses to their knees. And yes, Vashon businesses felt the pain. When I agreed to run for the position of President for the Chamber of Commerce earlier last year, I already knew that the economy was struggling, but did not anticipate the severity of the decline. The state of Washington and local businesses did not feel the meet charming shop owners and downturn from the current recession until the second half of last year. While we thought we were prepared for this recession, it still hit harder than expected. With all this gloomy news I continue to be amazed at the resiliency of our local businesses and their determination to vitalize their business and environment in challenging times. I have been stopping in our storefronts and asking business owners how they are doing. The overwhelming response has been that they are not only surviving, but some are actually doing better than last year. They have had to learn to be creative with how they run their business, spending marketing dollars carefully, cutting costs where they can and trying hard to hold on to their employees, who are a vital part of our local economy.

It also looks like our community is getting the message to shop locally. Everyday locals are sharing their Vashon shopping experiences with me and are thoughtfully, while also watching their spending, spending their hard earned dollars locally. They save gas and ferry fare, decrease their carbon footprint, other locals while strolling our business communities and often come home with a better product than they could have purchased in the city. And a big THANK YOU to our local businesses for their efforts at making Vashon an affordable and desirable place to shop.

attests to, are having a real struggle right now. They've got their game face on, but it's a struggle. That means struggle for the consuming side as well.

I already brought up Trader Joe's. Truth is I do most of my shopping there. I use the coupon book at Thriftway and buy the meatloaf special at the deli and then the rest I purchase overtown. Is that argumentative or truthful? Is that disloyal to the Island? Does it help to say that my son has just been made one of the managers at a new TJ's? What do I do? Whose family do I help? My own or someone else's?

It would be a stupid business move for the people who own the brick complex to not have solicited

We've Got a Lot of Kids Beautiful Meredith

by Kevin Pottinger

On a recent sunny Sunday afternoon in our rather unkempt front yard, our oldest daughter Meredith, age six, was trying to figure out how to play tether-tennis with her four-year old sister Gracie. Beautiful Meredith, willowy and graceful, with auburn hair, slategray eyes and splashes of tawny freckles, was dressed for the afternoon in a flowing pink Sleeping Beauty hanky gown with matching evening gloves, wearing a pair of giant pink and blue fairy wings on her back and a practical pair of pink rubber boots on her feet.

Meredith has lost six of her eight front teeth in the last year. The most recent tooth to wiggle free clattered down the drain in the bathroom sink. My wife Maria told a tearful Meredith that the Tooth Fairy would certainly be able to find it down there, and probably extract it from the pipe herself. I'm not at all sure about the "extract it from the pipe herself" part; it may just as well remain down there, if I were speaking for the Tooth Fairy, which in this case I think I am.

A couple of nights passed without remittance from the Tooth Fairy, probably because there wasn't a tooth under Meredith's pillow to remind Ms. Fairy to pay a visit during the night. Finally, Meredith took direct and decisive action, writing a polite note to the Tooth Fairy and placing it under her pillow, directing the Tooth Fairy to look in the drainpipe in the bathroom for the missing tooth, and if the Tooth Fairy had any questions to ask her Mom. The next morning Meredith found that the Tooth Fairy had replied in flowery purple script, thanking her for the tooth and the precise directions where to find it, and providing the traditional crisp fiver as payment.

Meredith has so many front teeth missing that she's lisping again. She's forced to gnaw everything with her molars. Taking a bite out of an apple is impossible: she can't wedge the apple in between her jaws far enough to get a bite on it with her molars, and if she tries to bite the apple with her front teeth (or tooth, actually) she just leaves a shiny patch without so much as breaking the apple's skin. Meredith writes love notes to Maria and me, sometimes two or three a day. They're usually rendered in colored felt pen and often include giant hearts and the words "I love you Mom and Dad," and her name, in her crooked kindergarten script, with random capitalized letters tossed in the middle of some of the words. Sometimes her notes are handdelivered; at other times, they're strategically placed where they'll be quickly discovered. Frankly, if life was fair, and everyone got all that they earned, I wouldn't get love notes from Meredith. Those notes never fail to lift my spirits.

Meredith bought a princess tiara from Betty at The Little House, with her own money, most of it coming from the Tooth Fairy. The tiara is beautiful, shiny, and very, very special. A couple of nights after she purchased it, Meredith asked me to build her a shelf to properly display her new tiara. Meredith had never asked me to build her anything before, although for a while she was asking me twice a day if she could get her ears pierced.

I rather quickly built a small, serviceable shelf, and she politely refused it. Instead, she drew a detailed picture of the sort of shelf she was looking for. Maria whispered that it's possible Meredith might keep this shelf for a long time, so I should probably make sure it's my best work. Following Maria's advice Meredith's and specifications. I built the shelf. I can confirm, however, that she's still not getting her ears pierced anytime soon.

Our kids take turns riding along with me when I go uptown to the lumber yard or the grocery store. When it's Meredith's turn, we hold hands and talk about kindergarten or her friends, or the music business or what we're having for supper. We might get a little bag of popcorn at the lumber store or a couple cookies from Bob's Bakery, and listen to the rock and roll station and munch our snack on the way home. For those few minutes alone with Meredith, it feels like I'm a good Dad.

AAAHLLG, ME BACK!

by Eric Francis http://www.PlanetWaves.net

Planet Waves by Priya Kale. For more daily Astrology, Horoscopes and information on Private Consultations please visit www.cosmicdiaries.com

Aries (March 20-April 19) If you've ever doubted your capabilities to say the word and make it happen, now would be the time to put your abilities to the test. You've always known you were born for greater things; your ability to dream the impossible and dare to meet your soul's longing, is your gift to the world. What ensues from your actions this week should be nothing short of miraculous, if you can resolve emotional or financial insecurities that hold you back when it comes to reaching for your dreams. You are now channeling a higher wisdom that allows you to see beyond the horizon and divine possibilities everywhere you look. What matters then is what you choose. Choose based on your deepest values, grandest vision and that which fills you with a sense of purpose. If you can dream, you can do.

Taurus (April 19-May 20) With the astrology peaking the way it is right now, although you may personally feel invisible be assured your awareness and gifts are anything but. Your humility has always been your greatest strength. I am not suggesting you change that, but although you've never hankered after success there is no reason to shy away from it either. You now have twice as much to offer than you may have thought you did and you are worth twice as much too. This is as true in your personal life as it is in your professional life. It may seem like magic, but yours has been a long, soulful journey of self-awareness which has led you to your calling. Accept this as you stand at the threshold of being who you were born to be, doing what you do best — being yourself. This is a rare, elusive quality that sustains and brings a message of hope to a larger world, that they can get by in this world doing just that — being true to themselves. You are living proof of it.

Gemini (May 20-June 21) A great, expansive dream or aspiration is luring you forward with a message of hope and you've come a long way in acknowledging "doubts" that say you'll never get there. This has also helped you find the inner strength and access to resources you tend to forget you possess. But most importantly what is putting you in the path of achieving the seemingly impossible, is your ability and desire to be true to yourself above all. Ask yourself now, when you envision the future or your success story, what does it look like? The more you can clarify and answer that, the greater your chances of recognizing the opportunities to make it a reality. Reach for the stars knowing at worst you may land on the moon. And you know well now, no matter what you will always overflowing in their support of your success.

Leo (July 22-Aug. 23) You are being called now to explore your most vivid imagination and boldly paint the sky with your colorful ambitions. You may feel unsure about this, but deep in your soul you know this is a risk you dare not pass up. It may indeed be scary but you are learning now just how deeply your destiny is entwined with the others in your life — gifts, wounds and all. Your freedom has always been important to you, but this is not about alienation or detachment. There is a powerful sublime truth floating into your world if you are willing to listen. A relationship you share has the potential to touch your soul deeply, expand your world and show you new heights of divine passion all at once. Healing is always a two-way street, but you can't expect others to be open if you lead with your defenses. There is a dual hope you carry and there may be no need for you to choose between personal pleasure and an altruistic vision you share

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sep. 22) As you regain your perspective on an important financial or intimate situation in your life, suddenly things begin to light up in a way that you did not think possible. All the while you've been tending to intense lifeand-death dramas, there's been a soulful dream awakening you to your greater mission on this earth. But that is the nature of passion, it has a way of coloring every small encounter in your day with sublime and grand hope. An ethereal connection you share has the potential to awaken you to the fire in your soul. In your professional as well as most intimate relationships, allow yourself to be moved by a desire to create a better world for all whose lives you touch. Do all you do with love and awareness and that is what will float back into your life in the small and definitely not so small ways.

Libra (Sep. 22-Oct. 23) You've been through a phase of review within your relationships, which has taken you into the depths of yourself, your own wounds, needs for independence, reassurance and fears of alienation. There has been an element of holding a crystal vision even through the dense fog and an important truth about a partnership reveals itself to you this week. They say the truth will set you free and it will this week if you listen to what someone is trying to say. Trust your heart above all and the great hope of freedom, adventure and passion you dream of. You may still have your doubts, but at least when it comes to a professional opportunity you can do anything but take what looks like a promising risk. Personally, you seek someone who sets your soul on fire when you find that, will you shy away or will you get that great, big leap of faith crusader of truth, be it in your sense of humor or your ability to speak the unthinkable. But right now your powers of communication border on the divine and surreal. If you've ever doubted your psychic or intuitive abilities, events this week should go a long way in changing that opinion. There is something or someone igniting flames of creative or sexual passion within you like you may not have experienced in a while. A partner, although present, may have their own doubts about a situation, but you now have a gift that allows you to see the rainbows where others can only see rain clouds. The only thing that matters now is that you be true to yourself; your soul is older than you and your childlike innocence is wiser than you imagine. Trust this if nothing else and be the Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your selfawareness reaches a surreal expansive peak this week, which may be overwhelming. Awareness, although a gift, can be a painful thing. Be bold, imaginative, honest and speak from the soul this week. There is a conversation or creative vision you share that has the potential to bring you deep clarity where there may have previously been a sense of fog. You may worry that if you are honest you will rock the boat with one delicate situation surrounding work or an aspect of your daily life. But truthfully you know that every risk has its downside and the higher the stakes the greater the rewards. An idea or truth may be too hot to handle, but pushing boundaries has always been your thing and you know better than anyone — only the truth can set you free. Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) You've been an unstoppable force lately, filled with more passion and desire than your usually soft and gentle demeanor. This is because your awareness of life and its frailty has grown at alarming and surreal levels, driving you to seize opportunities as they come. You are also recognizing the delicate webs that bind us with those that we love and the dynamic energy that sustains life itself. You can now manifest in your life a great hope you've been working toward, bringing you the emotional and financial independence you crave. But far from being a selfish desire, your ability to be bold and dive into yourself has the ability to flood not just your life but the lives of those you love with healing, hope and comfort immeasurable in its value — in both tangible and sublime, ethereal gifts.

have the ground beneath your feet.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You stand at a crucial turning point asking you to identify yourself in the sea of people whose lives are submerged with yours. You've learned now (perhaps painfully) the need to be clear about whose values you take on as your own. As you gain your sense of perspective, this week brings clarity regarding a deeply intimate or financial situation. There may be another way to get the freedom, autonomy and resources you need. When presented with an opportunity to make your mark on the world, let your imagination and infinite vision guide you forward. Resolve your own feelings of vulnerability and then recognize you would not be in this position, if it wasn't to reflect to you your inherent power. You are the captain of your ship — until you give over the reins to someone else. This is not about anyone else but daring to trust your own inner wisdom; knowing that those that love and believe in you will be there, toward happiness?

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 22) You've been on a quest for that elusive sense of belonging; a sense of feeling loved, appreciated and accepted for who you are and an ability to be comfortable in your own skin. But ultimately no one can do this for you but yourself. The question for you now is what or who it is that makes you feel at home. Is it the four walls you live in? The bed you sleep in? Your pets? Is it having the financial resources you need so you don't need to look at your bank balance? There are people who have all of these things and yet are plagued with restlessness. I suggest you go deeper in your quest for an answer. If you do, there is likely to be a huge revelation welling within your soul, flooding your life with deep warmth and hope for the future. You are already home, it may just mean you look within and around you to recognize that.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 22) As a Sagittarian you have always been a blazing voice of truth for the world.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 20) Your values are deeply coming into question and you are being reflected your own inner depth that you at times fail to recognize. Financial instability is never really the concern when you are a Capricorn, more than likely you live a life that other people envy. But there is a danger in getting caught up in other people's desires versus your own. As the fog lifts you are learning what drives you is not just your financial security but connections that make you feel warm, safe and loved. Be honest now with yourself and the people closest to you about your dreams, hopes and wishes. A partner is not only listening but is open to the depth of your message in a way that may even surprise you. You don't need to lead a double life to have what you want more of daily. Be true to yourself and all else will almost magically flow from that.

First Catch Your Wild Yeast

By Marj Watkins

My husband ran across a recipe on the Internet for no-knead bread that relies mostly on wild yeast. He makes a starter with a little whole wheat flour, a little water, and ¼ teaspoon dry yeast. It's at least a 36hour process. The result is a handsome and delicious loaf of properly risen whole wheat bread very much like the freshly ground wheat loaves his mother used to make on the farm. He loves it.

But I and most of our descendants cannot eat wheat and stay healthy. That, and curiosity about how people in my historical novels set in Charlemagne's 8th Century Frankland managed to get their bread to rise, led me to experiment.

I've produced a dense rye bread that tastes great using wild yeast only, but I could only get my barley starter to rise by adding a little wheat flour. That produced a heavy, but acceptably textured, good tasting barley "mesclin" (mixed flour) bread.

Eventually, these baking experiments and other early Middle Ages recipes may turn into a book with text about cooking equipment, chimneyless fireplaces, Charlemagne's Christmas menu, etc.

Want to join me in trying out some recipes? Naturally, yeast as we know it had not been invented yet. Below are directions for catching wild yeast. If you try either of them, please call me and let me know how your breads turn out, and how you may have tweaked the method or the ingredients. My phone is 463-9626.

BREAD from RYE STARTER

(Made With Tame Yeast) 1/2 cup rye flour

With Wild Yeast 1 cup rye flour

1 cup water

Mix in a large glass bowl if you have one. Otherwise, ceramic, or even stainless steel. Stir in: ½ teaspoon salt Cover with a light-weight cloth. A plain-weave cotton dish towel will do nicely. Let the mixture sit in a warm place. It likes 80 degrees, but dies of heat prostration at 95 degrees. It will rise at 77 to 80 degrees, but not as briskly. I've tried the top of the refrigerator (not very satisfactory), in the oven with the light on (ditto), and the back of the cook stove beneath the stove's light (worked best for me).

After 24 hours, peek and stir. Let sit another 12 hours. Small bubbles may start to appear. Feed the yeast 2 teaspoons of honey or sugar and ¼ cup flour. Stir in:

1 Tablespoon caraway seeds

Let rest another 12 hours or so, covered, and in warm place.

Add 1 ½ cups more rye flour and about 5 ounces of water, enough to make a batter a little thicker than cake batter. Let rise at least 4 hours more.

Transfer to an oiled, floured loaf pan or a non-stick pan sprayed with cooking oil spray. Cover with a second loaf pan and let rise for 45 minutes to 1 hour. (I use metal clips, one on each end of the pans to securely fasten them together.

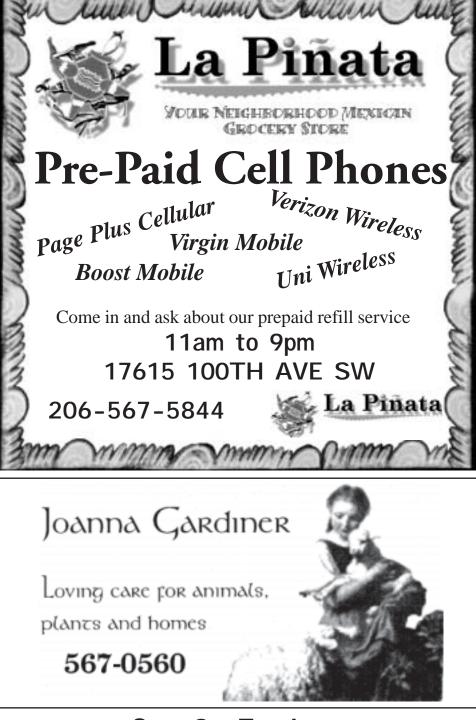

Heat oven to 450 degrees. Bake bread 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees. Continue baking for 50 minutes. Remove from oven. Let cool enough to take the pans apart. Turn loaf out onto a metal rack to cool almost completely before cutting.

H1N1 Flu Reaches Vashon

The good news so far remains that persons infected in the region appear to experience relatively normal symptoms and side effects unless already facing other serious health complications. In addition, this Vashon case involves an adult and not a student at one of the schools where infection might more easily spread to others.

On Saturday, June 6th at 3:00 pm at the Land Trust building, Kathy Abascal will lead a lecture and discussion on pandemic flu. How real is this threat? Have we missed serious cases of swine flu because it often causes atypical flu symptoms? How might you prepare for a difficult flu season? Is vaccination appropriate? Are there ways to prevent the flu? These are some of the topics that will be explored in this forum. Advance registration at the Roasterie/Minglement is recommended. Admission is $15. For more information, contact Kathy at anemopsis@yahoo.com or go to HerbsandInfluenza.com. The Seattle-King County Health Department provides more information and local tracking of the virus at www.kingcounty.gov/ health/h1n1.

Save Our Teachers

"Washington voters approved Initiative 728 some years ago. It requires the State to fund more teachers. The District expected those funds to be reduced due to the economic crisis, but we never guessed the Legislature would eliminate them entirely! We thought the loss of $1 Million in I-728 funds would be partially offset, because the legislature was considering a bill to raise the "levy lid." The "levy lid" is a state law that prevents our district from collecting $750,000 next year that people here voted for in the last Maintenance and Operations Levy. But then the Legislature adjourned without acting on the levy lid, and the Governor didn't call the Legislature back for a special session. So we were including applied mathematics and the cultures of many nations and peoples.

I also have to share a quick story. Last summer at church during the "Children's Moment," a lay leader talked with the youth about important adults in their lives. My son raised his hands to praise his last year's teacher, Mr. James, on the list to now be laid-off. As the lay leader wrapped up the discussion she brought it to the point where she discussed from one faith's point of view that Jesus Christ should figure most prominently in a child's development. Garnet wasn't quite with the program. His hand came up again and he said, "I really thank Mr. James is the best."

Even if this initiative goes well, with seniority considerations, Andy James may well not stay on next year. The point of the story lies in that Andy James characterizes all of the staff, those at risk and those not. Its well worth this community's effort to support the Save Our Teachers initiative whether they're a parent of Island students or not. The high standard of quality shows in so many ways from the number of Eagle Scouts Vashon produces to the many ways that the students involve themselves in the community and give back to it. My family will contribute not just because of our kids but also to keep our Island community such a great place.

1/2 Tablespoon dry yeast1/2 cup water

Stir flour and yeast together. Mix water in. Cover tightly with plastic wrap. Let it rest in a warm place for 24 hours. Work into it:

3/4 cup water

1 cup rye flour

2 Tablespoons honey

2 Tablespoons melted butter or canola oil

Cover and leave to ferment 4 hours or longer. Now you have your sponge.

Work in more flour.

The dough rises best with about 1/3 white wheat flour to 2/3 rye flour. Keep the dough soft. As a batter bread it requires no kneading, just an infrequent stir to move the yeast creatures to new food sources.

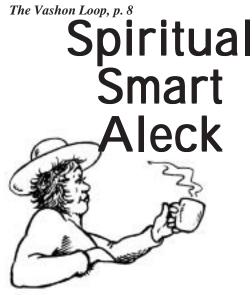

stuck holding the bag."

These cuts represent a major loss to the community in many ways. The quality of both the staff at risk and the programs they impart reach an extremely high level. The staff and subjects expose the students to knowledge and experiences that result in far more than good WASL data.

In addition to the classroom teacher cuts some of the other potential losses seem equally incredible.

Losing two librarians can only hurt teaching staff's ability to teach and student's ability to learn. I volunteer weekly for a fifth grade art class that far surpasses anything I experienced through getting my college degree. The excellence of what just normal kids produce from that class can only assist in their understanding of many other subjects

The school district campaign hopes to get donations in by June 15 in order to facilitate next years staffing decisions. Donations may be made on-line at www.Vashonsd.org or mailed to VISD, P.O. Box 547, Vashon, 98070.

Contingency Plan

By Mary Litchfield Tuel

It was on an episode of 30 Rock that Jack Donaghy (Alec Baldwin) turned to Liz Lemon (Tina Fey) and said, "What is your contingency plan for a crap storm of this magnitude?"

Or words to that effect.

life is full of surprises. You know the famous quotes: "Life is what happens while we're making plans." "When we make plans, God laughs."

It isn't that setting goals or making plans is wrong. It's just that we never have sufficient information in advance to know what to plan, or whether a goal will be attainable.

Lovers leave, toddlers throw up, cars break down, someone we love becomes physically ill, or mentally ill, or dies. Our house turns out to have rats, or burns down (well, at least that takes care of the rat problem). Many of us have life • truth, and our children grow up to Tuesday, June 9, 7:00 to 9:00 PM. dealer. None of us talked about that to speak about "Vision for Vashon" planned to get fat, or become Steve Graham 463-9579. addicted, or disabled, or to love someone who turned out to be unfaithful?

Sometimes we make plans and they do come to fruition and we realize, hey, this isn't what I want. Then some wise ass will come along and say, "Be careful what you wish for." Then we have to resist the urge to whack said wise ass a good one up the side of the head. So life is not perfect; in fact it is quite challenging at times. We get used to that. We learn to live life as it comes at us, and we try to acquit ourselves with grace and integrity. Most of us. We still make plans, but life happens, and we have to change our plans. The peculiar thing about hardship and adversity is that it can lead us to faith in something greater than ourselves. How many times have you heard people say something along the lines of, "I never would have asked for this to happen, but it has made such a positive difference in my life?"

your eyes to how you are surrounded by love, how noble people can be, and how precious life is. Your priorities get shuffled, and you realize that what you thought was important was getting in the way of what is important. What's important? Your relationship with the infinite; the love of friends and family; the joy in your heart when you wake up and think, "Wow, I'm still here."

It might seem like a stupid idea, having to suffer to appreciate what is important and real. I bicker with God about this: "OK, I learned a lot, but couldn't I have learned it from a less painful experience?"

Apparently not. Life is a harsh but effective teacher.

So make your plans. Set your goals. Just don't get too attached to them. Be prepared to become educated. Have a contingency plan for crap storms. My number one contingency plan is to close my eyes, bow my head, breathe deeply, and pray: "Help."

I've read organize-your-life Most people become aware that gurus who seriously ask, "Where do you want to be in five years?" and I can only seriously answer, "I have no idea." I have vague ideas. I'd like to be alive, and at least as healthy as I am now, and able to enjoy a slice of marionberry pie, a good read, a good laugh, and the love and companionship of my friends and family. Not necessarily in that order.

> I can get along without the marionberry pie. I just don't plan to.

The Hawthorns Bloom

by Kathy Abascal

Now that the elder flowers are dying back, the hawthorns are blooming like mad. Their masses of white flowers are covering trees and shrubs all across the Island, and they are absolutely gorgeous.

Herbalists gather hawthorn flowers, leaves, and small twigs in the spring for tea and tinctures. Although hawthorns are a bit thorny, they are still very pleasant to gather. And they are so very good for you. All of us over what the French call "d'un certain age" basically over forty - should really be using hawthorn on a daily basis. It is a mild but wonderful heart and circulatory medicine.

Hawthorn flowers and leaves are rich in flavonoids, and the plant has been used to help the heart for at least two thousand years. It extract in a fairly low alcohol increases the blood flow to the heart content, so you can make your own which ensures the heart muscle more oxygen and nutrients. The Eclectics physicians said it also helps prevent atherosclerosis but that aspect of the plant has not been studied. On the other hand, there are many well designed research studies that show that it, combined with other medicines, significantly helps people in chronic heart failure. Used regularly, hawthorn can also help lower blood pressure. It is not a dramatic blood pressure reducing-herb, and is usually not enough by itself to handle hypertension. Nonetheless, it should be part of your life if your blood pressure is creeping up. It just helps the heart work better by ensuring that it has a good supply so it is a good time to take your of nutrients, and that will benefit snippers and a paper bag and find your circulatory system as a whole.

The German phytotherapist, Dr. Weiss, M.D., called hawthorn a tonic for the ageing heart. He also used it in hypertensive patients not to reduce blood pressure but to prevent or treat heart complications that can result from high blood pressure. He also favored it to help treat minor arrhythmias in the elderly. Hawthorn is called a tonic because it needs to be used longterm as it may take many months for full results. It is not a magic bullet with an instant effect, especially in the elderly. Fortunately, hawthorn is completely safe for long-term use, and has shown no toxicity in any of the many clinical studies. Moreover, many of the patients studied were on a variety of other prescription medicines but no negative drug interactions were noted.

In folk medicine, the berry was the primary medicine although there is documented folk use of the leaves and flowers in parts of England. The Eclectics used the leaves, bark, and berries; Dr. Weiss used the leaves and flowers. The clinical studies mostly tested the leaves and flowers but some tested a combination of leaves, flowers, and berries. I, like many herbalists, prefer the latter combination but believe that any combination can be used successfully.

I highly recommend that people dry some hawthorn flowers for tea. It does not have an especially memorable flavor but it is pleasant and can be used by itself. For more flavor, you can add a teaspoon of hawthorn flowers to any tea blend you like. Even if your daily dose of hawthorn will be small, I believe a daily cup of hawthorn flower tea will gently but significantly protect your heart from some aspects of aging and poor life style. I use more substantial doses of the tincture for people with heart issues or hypertension, usually as the tonic part of a formula. I particularly like it for people with familial high cholesterol because I think it over time will counteract some of the ill effects of fat filled blood.

The constituents of hawthorn tincture using vodka or brandy. To tincture hawthorn, you simply chop the hawthorn flowers, leaves, and small twigs into little pieces and weigh it. Then you put it in a jar and press it down in the jar as much as you can. If you do not compress the herb, you will not be able to fit enough alcohol to the jar to make a proper tincture. Pour in twice the weight of the herb in alcohol. That is, if you have four ounces of hawthorn, pour in 8 fluid ounces of alcohol. Cap the jar, label it, and put it in a cupboard away from light to steep for at least two weeks. It is a good idea to shake the jar every now and again.

The weather is nice right now,

I know I promised you no more bad news, and I know that there are "bad news" aspects to what I write below, but the good news is, the truth is steadily coming out. Monsanto, the company that brought us terminator seeds and trees and who has steadfastly claimed that their GM products would have only good results – lower pesticide use, herbicide use, fertilizer usage – is being shown for the lying scum they are.

Number one in that regard is the explosion of "super weeds" that plague Monsanto's crops in the southern part of the country. Otherwise arable land in Macon, Georgia had to be abandoned because of herbicide-resistant pigweed – and over 100,000 acres are infested to a dangerous degree. As early as 2004, weeds that resisted the company's Roundup herbicide began to show up in the area, where nine out of ten farmers use Roundup-Ready seeds in their soybean fields.

Since then, these super weeds have appeared in other parts of Georgia as well as North and South Carolina, Arkansas, Tennessee, Kentucky and Missouri. Such problems have also arisen in France, where farmers have been forced to spend large amounts of money hand weeding their fields in an effort to save farms from these super weeds.

It is almost as if Monsanto wanted to design a deadlier weed, because they could not have done a better job if they had. Roundupresistant pigweed is the most feared super weed, alongside horseweed, ragweed and waterhemp.

"Palmer pigweed is the one pest you don't want, it is so dominating," says weed specialist Stanley Culpepper from the University of Georgia. Pigweed can easily produce 10,000 seeds at a time, is drought-resistant, and has very diverse genetics.

With valuable arable land worldwide being lost annually to oversalinization, irrigation saturation, and man-made desertification, we cannot afford to lose any acreage to the use of poisons and genetically modified crops. These are the very problems that opponents of genetic manipulation of food crops warned us all against - even here in this column _ and Monsanto spokespeople told us we were fearmongering critics. It turns out we were just a little more suspicious and forward thinking than the GM shills. Speaking of GM shills, Monsanto's technical development manager, Rick Cole, said he believed super weeds were manageable. "The problem of weeds that have developed a resistance to Roundup crops is real and [Monsanto] doesn't deny that, however the problem is manageable," he said. Suggestions for such managements include the use of products such as 2, 4-D, a banned component of Agent Orange, a dangerously toxic chemical that was used in Vietnam.

A number of agricultural specialists note that farmers are moving back to conventional crops because GM crops are becoming expensive.

In related news, a recently released scientific investigation in Argentina suggests that Monsanto's primary pesticide, Roundup, can cause "brain, intestinal and heart defects." The studies used amphibian embryos but the results are "completely comparable to what to what would happen in the development of a human embryo," embryologist Andres Carrasco, one of the study's authors stated.

The doses of herbicide used in the study "were much lower than the levels used in the fumigations," and so the situation "is much more serious" than the study suggests because "glyphosate does not degrade," Carrasco warned.

Shortly after Carrasco spoke publicly, he was the victim of an act of intimidation, when four men arrived at his laboratory in the Faculty of Medicine and acted extremely aggressively. Two of the men were said to be members of an agrochemical industry body but refused to give their names. Such are the tactics of a company that, obviously, cares more about profit than people.

A REPTILE DYSFUNCTION

May 29, '09

After our friend Tom had been a bachelor for several months, we stopped by his home to visit him. My wife asked if he was eating properly. "Well, I do eat a lot of dog food," Tom told her.

"Dog food!" my wife exclaimed, horrified. "I can't believe you would be eating anything like that!"

"Come to the kitchen and I'll show you," Tom replied.

Opening the refrigerator door, he waved his hand at a row of doggie bags from half of the restaurants in town.

Just Fiddlin' and Friends play Blue Heron Saturday, June 6, 7:30 pm by Janice Randall

When they began five years ago, Just Fiddlin' Round was a fledgling group comprised of young musicians and parent mentors. Over the years, the group has grown up and morphed into different variations, but with multi-talented Megan Hackett at the core (now 13 years old), Just Fiddlin' and Friends will bring more mentors and all new arrangements of some their favorite American roots songs to VAA's New Works Series.

Nurturing youth talent, Paul Colwell has been teaching Megan how to play mandolin and Merideth, Megan's younger sister (age 10) has been learning banjo from Rochelle Wolfe. Both mentors will be on stage during the evening, in addition to the girls' mom, Lanora Hackett on rhythm guitar, Stan Voynick, bass, Steve Amsden, lead guitar and Jean Richstad, fiddle and vocals. Expect to hear bluegrass tunes and cowboy favorites such as Old Dan Tucker, Will the Circle be Unbroken, Get along Little Doggies and more.

group The has played Strawberry Festival, Lavender Festival, Farmer's Market. Northwest Folklife, Kitsap County Fair and a 2004 VAA New Works. Megan and Merideth performed in Drama Dock production, Honk and both are cast in upcoming summer production, Urinetown. Last year the group performed on Seattle's Channel 21's Big Night Out, hosted by Kevin Joyce. CD's will be available at the show.

Tickets are $12 VAA members/ seniors/students, $14 general admission, available at Books by the Way, Heron's Nest and Blue Heron: call 463.5131 to reserve.

Archives – An Art Sale

Come early because one of the most fabulous and fun art sales you'll ever attend is happening at the Blue Heron Gallery week-end of May 29 - 31. Friday evening through Sunday afternoon, many of Vashon's best and favorite artists will put up "archived" works at greatly reduced prices.

Two years ago, Vashon Allied Arts held its first Archives sale. A resounding success, the event featured "archived" artwork from nearly 100 Vashon artists. Blue Heron Gallery overflowed with artwork of all mediums and there was a line at the door as Vashon art patrons came to see what their favorite artists had been storing.

VAA again presents the Archives sale and again artists have released many

Dust and Illusion

On June 20th at 9:30pm, the twenty three years after Larry Harvey first proposed the burning of a wooden man on a beach, a new documentary by Olivier Bonin will have its Northwest premiere at Vashon Theatre. Dust & Illusions has been four years in the making, and is an exploration and meditation on the degree of change that has occurred out in the middle of nowhere, or as some have called it- "now here." The "it" in question is the yearly Burning Man festival that takes place at the end of August on public lands in the middle of day before the Solstice and Cacophony Society and the Suicide Club, we are shown the origins of some of the art and counter-cultural influences that drive the festival in the Black Rock Desert today.

> The thing with Burning Man is that each individual's experience there is different, on the same day as well as from year to year. In post burn slide shows with friends, the most repeated comment I've heard is- "I didn't see that, where was it?" But what Dust & Illusions brings to any conversation about Burning Man is visual evidence of where it's been. To see all the participants in early Black Rock excursions joining together to raise the Man for burning by pulling as one on a northwest Nevada. Dust & Illusions takes the broadest and most in depth look of all the Burning Man films so far, at both the history and the concepts and controversy that drive and shape and change this event.

After an initial trip to Burning Man in 2003, Bonin began a serious investigation into the history and workings that have shaped the event. Residing in San Francisco, the birthplace of Burning Man in 1986 on Baker Beach, Bonin was able to access a wide variety of historical documentation of the event through film, photos and stories told by friends and people involved in the earliest manifestations of Burning Man. contemporary Through interviews with current Burning Man head organizer Larry and founders participants such as John Law pgr42@att.net. and Jerry James from the long rope gives one pause when contemplating the spectacle that the Saturday night "Burn" has become with its security perimeter, Black Ranger Rock presence and elaborate preburn fire dance and fireworks extravaganza. So what is the Black Rock desert in email conversation with director Bonin, what I heard from him was that when he asked twenty different groups around Black Rock City what the relevance of Burning Man was to them, without exception the answers revolved around the "power of community". But when they were asked to explain what that was, no one could really answer. Dust & Illusions doesn't answer any big questions about Burning Man- it does however ask some big ones. As a film, it is an expansive and thorough bit of social anthropology for anyone interested in a glimpse at one piece of the human attempt at life on this planet. As a Burning Man participant though, if you want to engage in a meaningful dialogue about where this event has been and where it is going, seeing this film is simply a must.

Dust & Illusions will be having a one time screening at the Vashon Theatre on June 20th ant 9:30 pm. Tickets are available online- presale $10, night of show $12- through the film's website: Harvey, as well as with the co- http://dustandillusions.com/. Weird Words Poetry and a culminating Eagle project. During Cody's Eagle Court of Honor, adult leaders acknowledged his diligence, perseverance and leadership in the troop. The Eagle requirements test a young man physically, mentally, socially, and spiritually.

Island Gains Eagle

"The hardest part for me about becoming an Eagle Scout," Cody said, "was when I first joined the troop I had a lot of my friends with me. But, as time went on, many quit and I didn't really know anyone. I even considered quitting because it was so awkward for me to not know anyone. I'm glad I stayed with it. I made many new friends and had a really good time."

Cody's Eagle Project was completing the hiking trail around Fisher Pond. Cody worked with the Land Trust, community members, and lead scouts and parents during the construction. Cody reflected, "I learned how hard it is to try to get the attention of a large group of young boys."

Weird Words Poetry put on and hosted by Mc Rex at Sound Foods at 7:00 on Friday, May 29th. There will be poetry by Rex, Per-Lars, Blomgren, Dom Wolczko, and more. There will be comedy by Per-Lars and prose by Brent Barnes. There will be music by Dom and Madeleine Wolczko, Paul Colwell and company, Skyler Ford, and Brendan Bric and Geran Webb. This is certainly enough, but there also may be a surprise appearance or two. Come, grab a bite to eat, converse with master conversationalist Mark Ledbetter and enjoy the weird words and sounds of music.

Vashon Troop 294 has 42 active scouts ages 11 to 17. Having a larger number of scouts who reach Eagle is no coincidence. The troop members have to support each other. A group of dedicated parents provide leadership and guidance. Finally, the Vashon community takes an active role in supporting the efforts of the scouts. What advice would Cody give to other scouts who want to become an Eagle? "I would tell scouts to do two things. First of all, don't get so caught up in trying to get all the Eagle required badges at once that you aren't having fun. Secondly, start your project earlier than you think you should, because there is an incredible amount of things that can make you have to change your project."
