Fun and Learning at Science Fair 2009

Strap on your jet pack, grab your safety goggles and prepare for Vashon PTSA's annual Science Fair, scheduled for Saturday, April 18th, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at McMurray Middle School. This year's event will again feature a wide array of science projects submitted by 6th and 8th-grade McMurray students, as well as fascinating displays, experiments and activities for islanders age 2-102.

Returning favorites will include the Bone Factory's spinetingling display of bones, Audubon's colorful local bird collection, hands-on science NAPA Closes Doors

Says Luhr, "When you find yourself in a hole, the first rule is to stop digging." Vashon has had an auto parts store for years. Stu's recollection follows: In 1972, Bud Sulski ran Western Vashon's Napa auto parts store Auto Parts where Print and Design is now located. The store burned in 1977 (or was it '76?) along with the Pharmacy. Then the parts store moved to what had been Holert's Bowling Alley (now Doug's Auto Repair). Then it moved to the old Quick Stop where the Monkey Tree is now, and finally to its current spot, which had been the Vashon Bowling Alley.

School Bond Debate

Islanders are talking about the School Bond Referendum that will be voted on in a special election on March 10. The issue placed before our citizens is whether to authorize a bond issue of $75.5 million to provide funds to construct a new high school classroom building that would replace the current facility, renovate other buildings, install synthetic turf on the football field, install a new track, construct a new secondary gym, upgrade ventilation and technology systems at McMurray and Chautauqua make other capital improvements. The cost of the bonds is anticipated to be $1.91 per $1,000 of assessed valuation of real property for 20 years.

Wrestling Madness

"Crazy as it is, we have two more WIAA State Athletes of the Week!" reported wresting coach Anders Blomgren. "We have never had more than two in a year, and to have two in one week is very, very nice!" Indeed. The Loop congratulates both Rogen Lopez and Sylvie Shiosaki! Lopez, a senior, pinned all three of his opponents to take first place in the 140-pound weight class at the Emerald Ridge Jaguar Wrestling Tournament. Lopez also pinned his Cascade Christian opponent Jan. 22 to lead the Pirates to a 47-25 victory. Shiosaki, a senior, pinned or scored technical falls on all four of her opponents to take first at 119 pounds at the 20-team Emerald Ridge Jaguar Girls Wrestling Tournament.

HOME TEAM Troy and Marie Explain New

Septic Requirements

We recently attended a presentation by the King County Department of Health that explained new regulations requiring septic inspections prior to the transfer of property. The new rules, which went into effect in January, are - ahem - interesting. Read on...

Troy: Marie, I don't think people understand the implications of the new King County code regarding the mandatory inspection of septic systems when transferring title to a house. We'd better explain, since it has serious implications for home sellers.

Marie: It sure does. What the new Title 13 code says is this: "The seller of any single family or multiple family residential property served by an OSS [on site septic system] shall, prior to transfer of title to the property, have a monitoring and performance inspection performed by a licensed OSM [On-site System Maintainer]. The Troy: licensed OSM shall file with the department an on-site system report and applicable fee in accordance with the fee schedule."

Troy: The intention behind the new regs is fine; it is in the public interest to ensure that septic systems are functioning properly and not contaminating the groundwater. And buyers certainly have the right to know the condition of such an important part of the property.

Marie: No one is arguing that - although one could argue that the contamination problem pales compared to the contaminants in the 400 million gallons of treated sewage pumped into the Puget Sound every day. Nonetheless, having well functioning septic systems in certainly in the interest of public health.

Troy: One problem that I foresee is that the county does not seem to be set up to handle this new requirement. As Program Manager Michelle Britt explained, they are counting on fees collected to eventually fund the staff to process the paperwork. The filing fee will be $95, and the report has to be filed within 6 months of transferring title. They are thinking it will take a week or so to turn the report around. Of course, this does not include the time or cost of having the inspection performed. Neil Drawbridge, Vashon's only OSM, will charge $175 per inspection. That's a very fair price, considering the amount of work that the inspection will require.

Marie: True. The OSM will have to fill out a comprehensive report about the system, as well as provide a drawing of the system if the county does not have one. The drawing will need to include things like the location of the tank, distribution box, and sand filter, as well as the approximate length of the drainfield. For systems within the so-called Marine Recovery Area, the OSM must also expose (yes, dig up) the beginning and end of drainfield lines. More on that in a future issue. I'll bet a fair number of homeowners don't even know they live in a Marine Recovery Area.

The timing of the inspection will get tricky, too. Currently, houses often sit on the market for more than 6 months. So if a seller has the inspection done when the house is listed, he might have to have it inspected a second time when the house sells. If the seller decides to wait until he has an offer on the house, he might be running the risk of uncovering a problem with the septic system that can't be fixed in time for closing. Or might cost a fortune to fix.

Marie: Now you're talking about an even bigger problem. There is no financial help available for people who learn that their septic systems are substandard. Repairs are expensive, and this new rule will definitely add an unwelcome dose of economic hardship to people who are already struggling. In the best-case scenario, someone will pay an extra $270 to sell a house. (On top of the septic pumping fee, by the way.) The worst case is, well, much worse.

Troy: But let's not be alarmists. Most septic systems work just fine, and will pass inspection with no problems. recommendation is to have the system inspected just prior to listing. Better to know what you're dealing with up front.

Interesting times, aren't they? If you are wondering if you should sell or not, give us a call. We can help you evaluate your options, as well as give you an idea of what your house would sell for in this market. No cost, no obligation. We're at (206) 463-LIST (5478), or write marie@yourHTR.com.

Hositively Speak

by Deborah H. Anderson

"Be Encouraged"

It's been interesting to see the deep panic set in. It's the kind of panic where the situation is so serious people start to put game face on and say, "We can get through this." even which, translated means "I don't believe we can get through this."

It's the kind of panic where you don't see how the other options are going to work out even as you try every option. It's the scramble to appear normal even when everything is abnormal.

It's the realization that all your presuppositions were wrong and you haven't got a clue how to put in a new baseline of understandings and beliefs.

You worked hard and just as you are making the biggest risk to make it bigger because all signs pointed to 'yes' you find you are in a completely different stadium than you thought you were let alone different game.

Everything you worked so hard for suddenly seems to have no meaning and you watch what you have built up translate into lost and nothing.

Oh yea, I remember that. And all around you are the people you thought were giving you good advice and you find out their lives are built on shifting sand and they are lying. Yet somehow they seem to be living their same fat cat lives.

I just want to encourage you to find the still small quiet place within and be encouraged.

Loosen your grip and be encouraged.

Distract yourself with something humorous or beautiful and be encouraged.

Let what you are loosing go and be encouraged.

Look for this to get better in years not months and be encouraged.

Take a deep breath and a long walk and be encouraged.

Speak up for the Truth within you and within the world and be encouraged.

Find a private place where no one will judge you and cry and be afraid. Don't let it stay inside you or will be compensating in bad ways and will not be encouraged.

Refuse to imitate the fat cats behavior and be encouraged.

Be as honest as you can be and be encouraged.

Slow down. Panic likes to run and you will not be encouraged.

Love yourself better and be encouraged.

Find the cheapest way to live you can. The Jones just lost all their money in bad investments. There's no point in keeping up with them. And be encouraged.

Do as much as you can for others for free and be encouraged.

Read a book and be encouraged. Don't pretend you're not in trouble and be encouraged. This is the way to better times. Love

Don't Forget the Birds

Hummers Get Busy

by Ed Swan

It's almost time for the Rufous Hummingbirds to arrive. The big wave comes in March when the salmon berry all bloom. But a few get here earlier. Vashon's earliest arrival falls on February 6 and in many years they show up as early as the late second week of February. Joy Nelsen may have heard their distinctive buzzing flight in the third week of January this year near Pt. Robinson. An ornithologist in Snohomish County saw one at his feeder January 31.

The hummingbirds getting busy may already be nesting in Vashon yards. Anna's Hummingbirds stick around all year and if you kept a feeder out this winter, they definitely would have shown during the cold. Some people attached small hand warmers to their feeders to keep them from freezing and to help warm the hummers when they sipped instead of cooling them Rufous Hummingbirds on their nest, photo by down.

Islander Ralph Moore.

The original range for Anna's Hummingbirds covered mostly California. But about mid-20th Century they started north and by 1976 Washington counted its first breeding record in Tacoma. In California, Anna's Hummingbird begin nesting in late November and time their mating for after the bloom of the local currants. So some of Washington's birds already are getting going depending on insects and the blooms of exotic flowering plants in their area. Their early breeding helps them avoid head-tohead competition for food for their young with other hummingbird species.

It would be really helpful for understanding Vashon's Anna's hummers for there to be more reports of their nesting and the dates of eggs being noted on nests and the hatching and fledging of young birds. If you have a hummingbird nest, please contact me at edwan@centurytel.net or call at 463-7976.

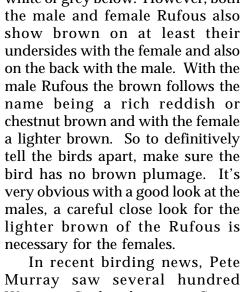

Both Rufous and Anna's Hummingbird males have red chins. Depending on the lighting, the red can look red, purple or black. The Anna's male coloring goes up over the chin to cover the top of the head as well but females and young males might have some red under the chin without it being on top of the head. Both Anna's and Rufous females look predominantly green above and white or grey below. However, both undersides with the female and also on the back with the male. With the male Rufous the brown follows the name being a rich reddish or chestnut brown and with the female a lighter brown. So to definitively tell the birds apart, make sure the very obvious with a good look at the males, a careful close look for the necessary for the females.

A Vashon Currency Exchange

The presentation addressed the difficulty of making the transition from a dollar-bought society to an exchange society. The solution proposed was to establish the exchange in conjunction with investing dollars in Vashon. Herring notes that "this is synergistic because leaving those dollars in banks is risky. Investing in Vashon is not risky."

The Committee on Alternate Currency will hold its initial meeting February 10 at 7pm at Cafe Luna.

Editor's Note: The currency on the front is not necessarily recommended by the Committee. It is merely an artist's middle of the night rendition of what an alternate curency might look like. I am wondering where he found the twenty.

Planef Wases

by Eric Francis http://www.PlanetWaves.net

Aries (March 20-April 19)

It's true that your charm is peak level, but you may sense that people don't exactly trust you. Is it them, or is it you who have your identity mixed up with someone who brings chaos rather than order to the situations in your life? You seem to be operating with the perception that you have two agendas. I don't think that's true. But if you don't know what your agenda is, then you may be hobbled by the belief that you really cannot trust yourself. This is the thing that kills confidence before it takes its first step. In particular, you need to ask whether your male friends and colleagues hold you as trustworthy and vice versa. Claim back your projections. Claim back your false perceptions. Step into your right to be honest. Eric Francis has more to say at PlanetWaves.net.

Taurus (April 19-May 20)

Your chart is a setup for funneling your current sense of some great mystery of who you are into your professional goals. I suggest you be aware that you're working with a kind of deficit that will lead you to want to compensate in some other way, such as conquering the world. This is how it's usually done, but you simply cannot afford to let your attention lapse where your personal growth or self-awareness are concerned. What you don't notice about yourself you're likely to see as flaws in other people. Any sense of emotional emptiness you feel, you're likely to discern is the result of others being unwilling to maintain selfawareness. What you observe may be true, but until you're in contact with your feelings, your senses and the odd dreams you seem to be having lately, your observations will matter little. Eric Francis has more to say at PlanetWaves.net.

Gemini (May 20-June 21)

Where are you looking for inspiration? Recent developments in a close relationship, despite having worked out well enough for everyone's mutual benefit, appear to have you wanting to head for the Himalayas. I think you fear there's something, despite all the working out, that didn't quite get worked out. I would guess that you feel you're invested in the situation to a degree that you cannot support or sustain right now, and you may be feeling you don't belong there. I don't suggest you run too far. Stay in contact with the litany of thoughts, doubts and sense that you're not good enough. The astrology is moving in your favor. Developments in the coming days and weeks will gradually take the pressure off and increase your sense of freedom, but until then, be aware that you may be feeling cagey. Eric Francis has more to say at PlanetWaves.net.

Cancer (June 21-July 22)

You need to make some important financial decisions, and you need to do this with a sense of focus and adventure. The more you narrow your goals and your financial commitments, the more opportunity will open up for you.

The two are related, and the connection point involves the conservation of energy, which includes both money and mental resources. And it involves focusing your eyes, so that you can see. More than you may imagine is available to you. Let go of the standard of perfection — you may not even be aware you drag this around. There is such a thing as good enough, and you are quite close to that point right now. Someone you are associating with on some pretty important matters needs to cross about two more mental hurdles to have your full trust. Give them a chance. Eric Francis has more to say at PlanetWaves.net.

Leo (July 22-Aug. 23)

Rarely do we see the extent of projection in our relationships. A little self-awareness is all it would take. The problem is that the selfawareness that would lead to witnessing this projection would dismantle all of our ideas about relationships, the ones we think we hold so dear. Most of our rules of right and wrong would fall apart; most of our accusations placed on others would be meaningless, because in large measure, we want the same things out of life. Yet here is the question: do we proceed guided by the aspect of our awareness who is strong and healthy, or do we proceed under the authority of the aspect of awareness who feels injured? In this matter, we do have a choice, but for a while it has to be made about once every minute. Now is an excellent time to practice. Eric Francis has more to say at PlanetWaves.net.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sep. 22)

Your desires are still running ahead of your ability to process them, but you do seem to be moving in a healthy direction. One thought at a time, you're beginning to see that you have the ability to make choices that acknowledge what you feel, what you think, and what you want. I know that this often feels like trying to thread two needles blindfolded. It helps if you turn on the lights and open your eyes. The issue of the week is likely to surface as some situation requiring you to someone in your life. You're in a delicate spot of examining where your ideals conflict with your true needs; and where your expectations of others are clouded by your own idea that you cannot measure up to what they want from you. Honest conversations are a good place to All expectations potentially dangerous, but the unstated ones are poison.

Libra (Sep. 22-Oct. 23)

Most original works of art are created from the feeling of an inner flaw or the need to heal. I think this is an altogether better state than creation from presumed mastery, mostly because a state of growth airplane, not the purveyors of the gives us something to reach for, whereas the idea of previously attained mastery does not. Therefore, if you feel like you're creating or loving from an imperfect space, that's the space to occupy, because it's where you're going to with their end of the deal, you may draw on the best of your strength and your potential. You may need to get over the feeling that your own inner sense of not being fully aligned is resulting in work or expression that is not fully aligned, or making your point adequately. Station: that the storyteller's job is to shed light and not to master. Eric

Francis has more to say at

A dialog is underway between your ideas and your feelings. In your life the two have a remarkable similarity, this, despite the general consensus that Scorpio is an emotionally driven animal. Your particular form of evolution is about integrating both sides of your brain, so that you are capable of complete thought and complete feeling. Then there is a second kind of integration, which (at least in the astrological sense) is vertical in nature. It involves what you experience internally coupled with what you accomplish. You might ask why you manage to pull off such great things when you're feeling the most insecure. The next question is: do you like the feeling, or can you have the great achievements and enjoy the feeling of quiet confidence? Eric Francis has more to say at PlanetWaves.net.

Remember, you're not really seeing the future; you are seeing potentials or what the Seth books call "probable selves." Why might one self be more probable than another? A HOLIDAY PIE FOR TWO

February brings us a month full of holidays. There's Ground Hog's Day on the 2nd, when we find out whether the smell of spring in the air foretells better weather, or, if the little animal cannot see his shadow, that we're headed for a stormy spring prelude. In our family we always note Copernicus's birthday on the 10th, which is immediately followed by son Steve's birthday the 11th.

Valentine's day on the 14th calls for hearts, flowers, and something delicious and either red or chocolate. Here's a recipe for a dessert that's equally appropriate as a finale to a Valentine's dinner, or one to honor our presidents, past, present and future. That's coming up on Monday the 16th, between Abraham Lincoln's birthday on February 12th and George Washington's on the 22nd.

I created this holiday low-carb dish with weigh-watching and diabetic and pre-diabetic readers in mind, but we can all enjoy its tartsweet flavor and brilliant color. An eight-inch pie serves two generously, twice.

Low Gluten BARLEY COCONUT PIE PASTRY Single crust for 8-inch pie Preheat oven to 400 degrees 1 1/4 cups barley flour 1/2 cup coconut shreds

½ teaspoon salt

5 Tablespoons soft butter 3 tablespoons water plus a few more drops, as needed

Mix dry ingredients. Work in soft butter. Drop by drop, add and stir in water until the pastry holds together. Spread waxed paper on counter. Roll out or pat into a 12-inch circle. Chill 5 minutes in freezer.

Invert over pie pan, carefully centering the pastry. Peel off waxed paper. Let rest a few minutes to warm. Ease pastry into pie shell forming a decorative wall around the perimeter. Prick the bottom and sides with a fork.

Bake 15 minutes, or until firm and light golden brown. Cool before filling.

FILLING FOR ONE-CRUST CHERRY ORANGE PIE

Makes one 8-inch pie (4 servings)

1 can sour cherries

1/2 cup cherry or cranberry juice 1/4 cup water or additional cherry

2 Tablespoons cornstarch or rice

2 Tablespoons orange concentrate

1/8 teaspoon ground cloves 1/8 teaspoon salt

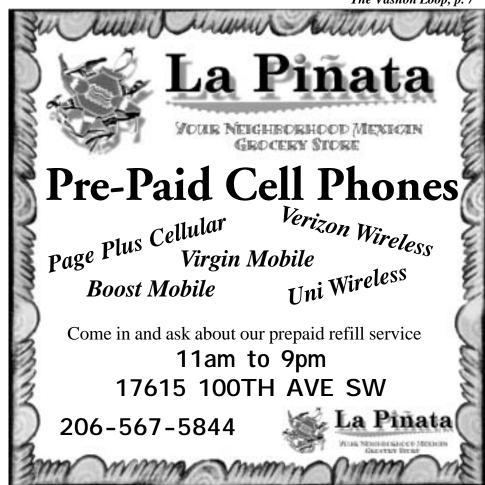

Sugar, Splenda® or Sugar Twin® to sweeten to taste

2-3 drops red food coloring

Bake the pie shell as directed above. Drain the cherry juice into a measuring cup. Mix 1/4 cup additional juice or water with the cornstarch in a small saucepan. Stir-cook over medium heat until it boils, thickens, and clears. Stir in the remaining ingredients.

Transfer this filling to the pie shell. Chill. Serve with vanilla yogurt or whipped cream. For a 9-inch pie, six servings, increase the pastry ingredients to 2 cups flour, 34 cup coconut shreds, 1 stick (8 Tablespoons) butter, and 5 tablespoons water, added gradually while mixing. Double the filling ingredients.

P.S. Someone recently asked me what he could do, dietwise, to help cope with his gout. My one-word answer: Cherries Cherries seem to counteract both pain inflammation, possibly because they're an excellent source of the mineral boron.

Spiritual Smart Aleck By Mary Litchfield Tuel www.spiritualsmartaleck.blogspot.com

By the Numbers, or, Do We Buy These Numbers?

Dire numbers tick by us these days - Boeing lays off employees, and Starbucks lays off employees and closes stores. Other employers lay off their workers by the tens of thousands. On the bright side, the US economy declined only 3.8% in the last quarter of 2008. Whoopee.

Tough times, and getting tougher. Something former Senator Daniel J. Evans said in an interview back in the 1970s keeps running through my memory.

Evans managed the affairs of Washington State as Governor from 1965 to 1977, and later served in the Senate, following Henry "Scoop"

Jackson. Slade Gorton followed Evans into the Senate, but I only mention that so I can mention that we used to call Slade Gorton "Skeletor." He earned this sobriquet bearing surprising likeness to the Masters of the Universe®TM villain of that name.

Getting back to Dan Evans: the Boeing Bust occurred during Evans' terms as governor. In those pre-Microsoft, pre-Starbucks, pre-"let's move the corporate offices to Chicago" times, Boeing employed more people than anyone else in Washington. When Boeing stumbled, Washington stumbled. In those days a famous sign along I-5 read, "Will the last person leaving Seattle please turn out the lights?"

I arrived on these beloved moldy shores in 1972 and missed the lowest days of the Boeing Bust. The local economy still ailed in 1972, but improved incrementally over time.

Somewhere around mid-decade someone interviewed Dan Evans unemployment. interviewer asked, "Are you worried about the 12% unemployment rate?" Evans replied, "Well, it depends on whether you're looking at it on the way up or on the way down." He pointed out that Washington was coming back from an 18% unemployment rate.

Those who lost their jobs were forced to find new paths in life. For example, Hammond Ashley, former Boeing employee, became one of the premier string bass builders in the world. I knew about Hammond Ashley because I took a cracked dulcimer to his shop for repair around 1974. His shop lay under the flight path at the south end of the SeaTac runway. When you walked from the green and gray suburban surroundings of Des Moines into his shop and saw the ranks of glowing instruments along the walls, you knew you were in a world of wonder, created from wood and glue and loving care. Although many people left the state seeking opportunities elsewhere, others, like Hammond Ashley, started a new profession, and a new life, right here.

The numbers I heard on the radio last week stated that unemployment is at 8%. Of course, if you lost your job, you experienced 100% unemployment, and the numbers (ONLY 8% unemployment; ONLY a 3.8% decrease in the economy the last quarter) comfort ye not.

We hear all these numbers. but what do they really mean? The numbers that count are: how many numbers do we have ir the checking account? How many numbers do we need to keep this roof over our heads? Do we have enough numbers to buy groceries this week? Do we have jobs so we can get more numbers?

mlt 1/30/09

It turns out that our ability to control numbers was exaggerated. So what do we do now? All the usual remedies: we share; we cut back; we make do. We plant gardens, mend what is broken, put on a sweater, and drive less. Do these measures wound your pride?

Pride takes a lot of numbers. Pride and his brother shame may have to be two of the things we cut back in these tough times. I'm about 50% sure of that, up from 35% last

by Mike Ivaska

"I am the resurrection and the life. Whoever believes in me, though he die, yet shall he live..." - Jesus Christ (John 11:25)

Father Richard Roach was a fear. At other times, to hear his man who I considered a friend. He and I, as Christians, did not believe a lot of the same things. To his credit (and I hope to mine), what friendship we had been allowed to develop was not based on pretending that truth did not matter - that one truth was okay for me while another was okay for him. Not that we ever really debated much, either. Father Roach was, and perhaps still is, Catholic, and I was, and still am, evangelical. Those were the facts, and knowing that allowed us to talk - the labels themselves not being the issue so much as shorthand for two vastly different ways of understanding what our Lord wanted of us.

I think Father Roach wanted in some sense to be my mentor, and in some sense I wanted that too. His accrued wisdom and knowledge made him an enjoyable conversationalist. His barbed comments about "you Protestants" were never really combative so much as goodnatured sparring. Often he had direct, personal knowledge on issues or authors I would mention to him - something I did not often run into among folks in my own church. His passion for learning excited me after having wrestled with a brand of Christianity that had nothing to offer intellectual effort except a certain distrustful almost quaint caricatures of what we "fundamentalists" are and think could only elicit a grin from me. It can be pretty funny having someone tell you what it is you think.

Father Roach endeared himself to my father because of the interest he took in my brother and I, always asking about us whenever they saw each other. I am not sure he even knew what my brother looked like. Still, he always asked. When he heard about my father's employment issues and my mother being diagnosed with cancer, he made sure we knew he was praying for

I once made a comment to him about some of my fellow believers, who felt that ultimately "the gospel was not going to succeed" and that all would be lost. Father Roach shook his head and muttered, "the gospel already HAS succeeded!" familiar with the Apostle Paul would know what Father Roach meant.

I think that the only regret I have is not pursuing the friendship more. Because of unforeseen difficulties. I had no chance to say goodbye to him at his funeral. This is my small effort to speak well of a man I had come to respect and I think love. I hope with all my heart to see him again And so far as our differences go, I will have to leave those things in the hands of God.

We've Got a Lot of Kids

by Kevin Pottinger

A Lotta Lotta Tools

On a sunny Saturday afternoon in mid-January, I'm lying in the wet gravel of our driveway, straining with a socket wrench, ratcheting loose a dozen bolts on the automatic transmission pan of our minivan that I've propped up in the driveway with a couple of concrete blocks. Our dull-brown peacock rounds the side yard as I'm grimacing and contorting my body to reach the farthest bolts.

The peacock cocks his head to the side, scrutinizing the situation. Standing next to me in the gravel, he examines the soles of my shoes at close range and surveys my legs sticking out from under the van. With great interest he inspects the various chrome-plated tools glinting in the sun, first with one brown-black eye, then the other. He cranes his long neck under the car to study the transmission pan operation. For several minutes the peacock watches me work. At last, satisfied that there is no food whatsoever involved in unbolting a transmission pan, he moves on to peck at things in the grass.

Our four-year old twin boy Alec rounds the side yard, squinting at the bright sun high in the afternoon sky, and falls facefirst over a log. He slowly picks himself up out of the wet grass, and squats next to me, studying the tools in the toolbox. He stoops to look under the van, and his disembodied, upside-down head pops into view. "What you doing, Dad?" he asks. After I describe in general terms my plan to repair the car, he turns to again examine the assortment of tools gleaming in the sun. He picks up a crescent wrench. "Is this yours, Dad?" "Yep," I reply through clenched teeth, struggling to break a rusted bolt loose. He paws through the tools in the toolbox. "These tools are all yours, Dad. You have a lot of tools, Dad. A lotta lotta tools."

A basketball rolls lazily under the van to wedge under my head as I wrestle with the wrench. Our oldest boy Colin has come outside to shoot some hoops in the flickering January sunshine. I push his ball back out from under the minivan. "Thanks, Dad," Colin says cheerfully as he grabs his ball and dribbles it in the gravel before trying a fifteen-foot jump shot that bounces crazily off the hoop and careens straight for Alec's head. Alec bends down to address me again, narrowly missing getting pasted with the basketball that's at least half as big as he is. "What this, Dad?" he asks. "What is what, Alec?" Alec repeats himself, a little louder this time.

Another shot of Colin's caroms off the backboard while Alec is mesmerized by the sunshine playing off the shiny steel of the vise-grips, and again Alec misses getting creamed with the basketball by a quarter of an inch. The ball bounces harmlessly against the house. Alec turns to look, startled by the sound of the bouncing ball, and falls over in a crumpled heap.

I hear my wife Maria's footsteps on the gravel, and presently I can see her two brown shoes as she stands next to the van. "What do you want to do for supper?" she asks. Our four-year old twin daughter Gracie pokes her head under the minivan, her disembodied head upside-down, pigtails brushing the gravel. "Hi Dad," she says. "Hi Gracie." "How about Mexican?" I offer, addressing Maria's shoes. "Colin, get off of the roof!" yells Maria. Colin offers a lame explanation of why he was on the roof that involves his best friend who once made a paper airplane that flew a half-mile.

As a kid I spent hundreds of hours holding the flashlight for my Dad while he got our various used-car-lot cars running again. It was usually cold and dark and wet, and usually after supper. It seems like the old man was always under the car, swearing. While I held the light in my yellow raincoat, my Dad grimaced and contorted in the cold, wet muck, his legs splayed on the pavement, soaked to the skin, repairing our Mercury station wagon with the fake wood panels, or the pink and black Dodge Impala sedan or the '58 Buick Special convertible, so one or both parents could get to work in the morning. I ached to go inside where it was warm and watch TV in dry pajamas. My fingers were numb. My brain was numb. But my Dad was a lot colder than I was.

Valare Toujours

Dear Madame Toujours,

having an argument, and I wonder if you could shed some light on the issue at hand. See, I have known my friend Harry for twenty years and his ex-wife Maggie for about five. They were married for about nine months and got divorced right after their son Ronnie was born because Maggie said that Harry beat her and Ronnie and she was scared for her

The thing is, I just can hardly believe that Harry would behave this way. He's so nice. All his exgirlfriends say he was totally sweet and gentle and wouldn't hurt a fly. It gets even wierder. Sometimes after he has been around Maggie and Ronnie, Harry shows up with cuts and bruises on his face and arms. One time. I saw him in the grocery store and he tried to pretend he didn't see me. When I caught up to him, he had a big cut on his face with about thirty stitches. He said he walked into a door, but the next day, Maggie claimed he beat her up and she cut him in self-defense, but she didn't have any bruises or anything.

I confronted Maggie and told her I thought she had been beating up Harry. She laughed at me and said that's impossible. Women can't be violent against men and it never happens except when the woman is defending herself. I have always thought women were morally superior to men, but Maggie is making me doubt this basic truth about the sexes.

Sincerely, Confused Feminist Chere Mlle. Feminist,

Quelle domage, if only it were the My friend Maggie and I are truth that the female types were having the big moral superiorities, mais non. Eh bien, the female type persons, they are assaulting les hommes as many times as the vulgar manly persons are making the violence against les femmes. However, these facts, they are mostly going unnoticed because the manly persons, they are large and hairy. Everybody is saying, "But if the female type is actually assaulting him, he will defend himself, non? Then she will have the injuries. If she is not having any injuries, then it is that she is not abusing him." However, if M. Harry, he is defending for himself the life and la femme, she is having the bruisings, then everybody is saying, "But see, she is having the bruisings. It is that he is the big abuser."

> The problem, it is that everybody is supposing that the female types, they are extremely stupid and helpless. This is the big insult. Mostly the female persons, they are noticing that they are smaller and weaker. Cleverly, however, they abandon the brute force and apply the miracles of science to the business of abusing the spouses. The dainty, small person, she is not needing the big muscles to put the poison in the beer or to sneak up behind the innocent fellow and surprise him with the knife in the left kidney. Or she may slip into the bedroom while he sleeps and remove vital portions of his anatomy.

Bon Chance, Mlle. Feminist and if you are being determined to have the friend such as Mlle. Maggie, you are possibly being wise to look frequently over the shoulder.

Things not to give your dog.

by Kathy Abascal

Opi, my little dog, was recently diagnosed with hip dysplasia and prescribed a non-steroidal antiinflammatory to help him stay comfortable. I decided not to use the drug at this point because it has potential side effects that are rare, but can be serious.

Long before I became an herbalist, I had a dog with bad knees who was prescribed a low dose of aspirin. The aspirin caused internal bleeding and he nearly died which taught me to take potential side effects very seriously. My decision to use herbs for Opi is now leading me deeper into the world of herbs for dogs.

Shortly before Opi started limping, he became interested in a wonderful food and medicinal but willow growing by pond. our While his buddy Yodha busily ate grass, he tried to gnaw on the tree, something he never had done before. Willow bark is used as an analgesic and contains salicylates that can be transformed into acetylsalicylic acid or aspirin. Aspirin inhibits blood platelets from They are toxic at about ¼ of an sticking together while natural ounce per pound of dog. The salicylates do not. This means that ASPCA states that all dog willow does not have the bleeding ingestions of grapes or raisins potential of aspirin (and this means that it cannot be used to thin the blood and prevent heart attacks).

Nonetheless, many herbals for dogs caution against the use of willow bark. I suspect this advice is due to confusion over the differences between plant salicylates and the effects of the chemically altered acetylsalicylate in aspirin. Tilford, the author of a very nice herbal for animals, for instance states incorrectly that willow contains "salicylic acid (aspirin)." Of course, it is possible that dogs metabolize plant salicylates differently than we do, but I doubt it. I am researching this question but have not yet come up with the definitive answer. In the process, however, I learned to my surprise that some seemingly harmless foods can be toxic to dogs.

For instance, onions are dangerous to dogs. They can cause a sometimes fatal hemolytic anemia as components in onions cause their red blood cells to rupture. It takes a fair amount of onions to cause real damage, about half an ounce/pound of dog. This means that Opi would have to eat about 12 ounces of onions to ensure a toxic dose – something he is not inclined to do. But even a non-toxic dose is not good for him. And the toxic dose is much lower in cats, kittens, puppies, and dogs drugs certain (like sulfonamides or Tylenol, a nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drug. Many vets also urge caution when feeding human baby food to animals. Apparently, many of the meat products for babies contain onions or onion powder. Actually, I never fed Opi much in the way of onions and he will get even less in the future.

Interestingly, garlic has some of the same potential as onions but is much less toxic. When I learned this, I checked my dry dog and cat foods. Sure enough, both contain garlic. Not enough to cause injury but it seems silly to add an ingredient to their food that is not healthful for them. I also realized I was giving my dogs treats made of brewers yeast and garlic powder. And I know many people who feed their dogs cloves of fresh garlic in the hope of discouraging fleas. Garlic is > my sense now is that dogs my do not need garlic and will do better and be happier with some fish oil capsules wrapped liverwurst.

I also learned that even small amounts of raisins or grapes can cause kidney injuries in dogs. should be taken seriously, especially if they cause vomiting, diarrhea or lethargy.

So no more chocolate covered raisins for Opi. Just joking—he likes his chocolate straight. Most of us know that chocolate is not good for dogs and have an easy time not sharing our chocolate with them (all the more for us). The theobromine in chocolate can cause seizures, coma, and death. Actually though, it takes much more chocolate than either onions or raisins to cause a problem. According to one vet site, the toxic dose ranges from 1 ounce of milk chocolate/pound of dog to 1 ounce/9 pounds for baker's chocolate. The real problem with chocolate is that dogs, like humans, develop a fondness for chocolate and can easily down a toxic dose if left alone with a box of chocolate. And definitely do not give your dog chocolate covered macadamia nuts. It turns out that relatively small amounts of these nuts can cause vomiting and a weakness that prevents them from standing or using their hind legs. Typically the dogs recover from macadamia nut poisoning though.

Finally, do not use pennyroyal essential oil on your dog. People still come into the store for oil to use on their dogs. I have read far too many cases of dogs dying from this "natural" flea treatment. More often than not, it will kill the dog rather than the fleas. Even though I traditionally stay away from pesticides, I would use Advantage before I would use pennyroyal.

New Classes, New Times: Eating for health & weight loss.

By Kathy Abascal

Inflammation is a big factor in most chronic conditions including hypertension, arthritis, and diabetes. Excess abdominal fat is another inflammatory condition that takes a significant toll on your health. Fortunately, diet can effectively and easily reduce inflammation and the problems it causes. In this class you learn why some foods quiet inflammation while others increase it. Eating to quiet inflammation provides significant benefits that include a relatively effortless weight loss (if needed), improved sleep, and the disappearance of annoying aches & pains. New classes: Wednesdays beginning February 11th at 10:30-12:00 AM and at 7:00-8:30 PM. Each class runs for 5 consecutive weeks. Advance registration and payment ($75) is required. Sign up at the Roasterie/ Minglement. For more information, contact Kathy Abascal anemopsis@yahoo.com.

Wrestlers Rock!

Vashon Wrestling Team beats wrestlers into the JV Tournament. Cascade Christian 47-25.

With the win, the Pirates improve to 7-2 on the year, entering the last week where they will compete against a very good Eatonville squad (at home on Wednesday; it's senior night!), and then on Thursday at Orting (the #1 team in the state.) If you want to see some great matches then go to these events that conclude the dual meet season. Brief Notes on the Cascade Christian Dual Meet: Jordan Lopez and Max Croonquist recorded "Double Doubles" meaning that they pinned BOTH their JV and Varsity oppononents! Other notable JV pins were recorded by Tucker Lazare, Maximo Mandl, and Elliot Ellingsen.

Pirate Wrestlers Bring Home Treasure From Emerald Ridge Tournament

Last Saturday, The Vashon Wrestling Team traveled to Emerald Ridge High School to compete in the prestigious Jaguar Invite- a tournament made up of three different tournaments, in one facility on one day. There was a Varsity Tournament for Guys and Girls, as Ellingsen. 3rd place winners were well as a JV tournament. All Jake Ludberg, Sjors Steneker and 4th and all experienced some success Tucker Lazare. Pins, bonus points, and displayed vast improvement.

The Girls Tournament: Sylvie

Shiosaki won the 119 pound title, pinning or tech falling all four of her opponents. There were 20 girls teams there, and if wrestlers and fans hadn't heard of Sylvie before this weekend, they know who she is now! Iris Spring also competed in two hard fought losses. (The Girls Team is currently ranked 3rd in state.)

The Guys Varsity Tournament: Vashon only entered 4 scoring wrestlers in enter most of their younger Brigitte Webb photo.

Once again, these wrestlers showed that quality is more important than quality, placing three wrestlers into the finals and placing the team in the middle of the 10 team pack. Rogen Lopez pinned all three of his opponents to take 1st, dominating a Kelso wrestler in the finals. Geran Webb placed 2nd after pinning his 1st two opponents before losing to a White River wrestler in the finals. Sam Chapman placed 2nd, losing a whirlwind battle, 12-10, to a Kelso wrestler. Fittingly, the match was awarded the Most Outstanding Match of the Tournament and he received a large plaque. Graeme Britz won one overtime match against a Kentwood grappler, and finished one match from placing. (The Guys Team is currently ranked 10th in state.)

The JV Tournament: Three wrestlers took home 1st place and show they are forces to be reckoned with very soon: Dominik Stemer, Jordan Lopez, and Deven Forest. 2nd place ribbons went to Maximo Mandl, Keegan Shrum, and Elliot wrestlers received valuable mat time, placers were Kevin Thomas and and wins helped the team to a 3rd place JV team finish!

If you have not signed the ferry petition you have about one more week to do so. At the time we went to print, volunteers had gathered 2457 signatures - almost halfway to the goal of 5999. Petitions will be delivered to the legislature at a big rally on February 18. Stop by the library, The Hardware Store, the Chamber of Commerce or Keller Williams Realty to read the petition and hopefully add your name to the list. And you can sign up to attend the rally in Olympia. There's a bus and everything - get your civic mojo on.

The next day the farmer drove up and said, "Sorry son, but I have some bad news, the donkey died." Kenny replied, "Well then, just give me my money back." The farmer said, "Can't do that. I went and spent it already." Kenny said, "OK then, just unload the donkey." The farmer asked, "What ya gonna do with him?" Kenny: "I'm going to raffle him off."Farmer: "You can't raffle off a dead donkey!"Kenny: "Sure I can. Watch me. I just won't tell anybody he is dead." A month later the farmer met up with Kenny and asked, "What happened with that dead donkey?" Kenny replied, "I raffled him off. Kenny grew up and eventually became the chairman of AIG.

Lift those Winter Blahs with Artful Vashon

One wintry Sunday last year, pirates as the students in Vashon College's Artful Vashon course became the crew of Captains Jim (Sir) and Jackie (Ma'am) Chobot. That Pirate pair transformed the courtroom into a version of the 22 year old Dragonfire Pirate Camp beloved by island kids, and established piratical rules for the day. It was the first time adults who had heard youthful raves about the wonders of Pirate Camp were able to experience first-hand the piratical play those kids had loved. And they, too, raved about it.

The Chobots will repeat that opportunity again March 1st for the opening session of Artful Vashon 2009. The six week course will meet 5th from 3 to 6 p.m. to explore the artfulness on Vashon and develop available. ideas to increase opportunities for Vashon's artful adventures.

Students will visit the home and Courthouse Square was invaded by garden of mosaic artist Claire Dohna where they will observe the imaginative work that has been featured at the Pacific Northwest Flower and Garden Show, and in Sunset, and Pacific Northwest magazines.
